

MEET THE CONTRIBUTORS

Talia Schwartz Maor

University of California Berkeley, Boalt Hall School of Law
taliashwartz@berkeley.edu

Talia Schwartz-Maor is a doctoral student at UC Berkeley Boalt Hall School of Law, where she studies the intersection of law, society and technology. Her research interests relate to the legal functioning of technology and its impact on legal norms and institutions. Her dissertation is about the role of collaborative information communication as an alternative justice system; more specifically regarding the phenomena of sharing on social media and how it is played out as a new form of social control mechanism.

Suryo Ariyanto Nugroho

University of Tokyo, Graduate School of Public Policy
ariyanto.suryo@gmail.com

Suryo Ariyanto Nugroho is a master candidate at University of Tokyo Graduate School of Public Policy (GraSPP). His research interests include international development, small-medium enterprises (SME) development, and the political economy of regional integration in Asia. Prior to his study at the University of Tokyo, he received a master's degree in business and entrepreneurship at the University of Cambridge Judge Business School and also Middlesex University, London. Furthermore, his work experience in a venture capital firm increased his interest in the importance of small-medium enterprise (SME) development policy to support the economic growth of a country.

Chris Kruckenberg

University of Minnesota, Humphrey School of Public Affairs
kruckster@gmail.com

Chris Kruckenberg is a public policy student at the Humphrey School of Public Affairs in Minnesota. His focus of study is on Security Policy and East Asian Affairs, especially the major areas of conflict in the region. He enjoys Korean food and lives in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Runhua Wang

University of Illinois College of Law

rwang37@illinois.edu

Runhua Wang is a third year J.S.D candidate from the University of Illinois College of Law. She received her L.L.M. in the same law school, and double-majored in Industrial Engineering and Law in Beihang University in China. Her area of interest is law and economics, intellectual property, government grants and financial policies. Currently, she is doing an empirical study about the technical innovation by small and medium-sized enterprises (SME) in China.

James Shin and Jack Walsh

Underwood International College, Yonsei University

james.yong.shin@gmail.com and jackwalsh90@gmail.com

James Shin is currently a senior studying Life Science and Biotechnology at Yonsei University. Currently he is the president of an academic student association for students passionate about foreign affairs called Visionaries of International Studies (VOIS) at Underwood International College, Yonsei University. Originally from Atlanta, Georgia, he moved to Korea after living in New York City looking for something different. He plans on studying law after graduation. Jack Walsh is a political science and international relations major at Yonsei University. His senior thesis is on cyber security and diplomacy. Born and raised in Maine, Jack acts as the head editor and director of research of Visionaries of International Studies (VOIS).

Justin Su Wan Yang

King's College
su.yang@kcl.ac.uk

Justin Su Wan Yang is currently a PhD Researcher in international criminal law and international human rights at King's College London. He received his master's degree in Public International Law at Leiden University. Previously, he worked at the United Nations International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (Defence for Prlić), International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (Trial Chamber for Nizeyimana), and the Special Tribunal for Lebanon (Trial Chamber for Ayyash et al.). He is originally from Korea.

Zhao Jun and Hu Yu

East China Normal University and Shanghai International Studies University hillzhaoshi@163.com and 1968962041@qq.com

Zhao Jun graduated with a Ph.D in the Middle East Studies at Shanghai International Studies University in 2012. He works as a postdoctoral researcher at East China Normal University and currently holds the position of Associate Professor of Middle East Studies Institute at Shanghai International Studies University. He has research interests in terrorism in the Middle East, Arab League and East African Community. He is the author of Arab League and Arab Order (to be published in 2016) and the co-author of Case Studies: the Development patterns of Islamic Countries in the Middle East after World War II. Hu Yu is a Ph.D candidate in English language studies at Shanghai International University. She is specializing in cross-culture interaction between the Islamic and Western world and is working on a dissertation titled Napoleon Bonaparte's Culture Communication in Egypt.

Niv Horesh

University of Nottingham

Niv.Horesh@nottingham.ac.uk

Niv Horesh is Professor of the Modern History of China and the Director of the China Policy Institute at the University of Nottingham, United Kingdom. His first single-authored book, Shanghai's Bund and Beyond (Yale UP, 2008), is the first comparative study of foreign banking in pre-war China. The book surveys the impact of British overseas bank notes on China's economy before the outbreak of the Second Sino-Japanese War in 1937. Horesh's second single-authored book, Chinese Money in Global Context (Stanford UP 2014, Economics and Finance Series) makes for a China-centered examination of the evolution of money and finance around the world since the birth of coinage in Lydia (in what is today western Turkey) and up to the present. It also situates current efforts at RMB internationalization within the broad sweep of the post-Bretton Woods world order. His third single-authored book is Shanghai, Past and Present (Sussex Academic, 2014). It is an introduction to the warp and weft of the city's history written with non-specialists in mind.