Papers, Essays and Reviews The Yonsei Journal of International Studies

Call for Papers

The Yonsei Journal of International Studies is a biannual interdisciplinary journal affiliated with the Center for International Studies at Yonsei University, Seoul, South Korea. The Journal welcomes submissions from all scholars, especially graduate students and junior professors that fall within the diverse field of International Studies.

We are currently accepting submissions for the forthcoming Fall/Winter 2015 issue!

The Journal encompasses a wide scope of varying disciplines and methodologies, but each issue will attempt to be thematic. The Journal is divided into three sections, in addition to an interview section managed by the Journal staff.

PAPERS

This section includes feature-length articles of original research and must include proper citations. Papers should range from 3,000 to 8,000 words.

ESSAYS

This section includes essays that take stances on issues and develop sophisticated arguments in the form of editorials, recommendations and reflections. Essays should range from 1,500 to 3,000 words.

REVIEWS

This section focuses on evaluations and reviews of existing arguments contained in essays, articles and books, in addition to policy reviews or previously published material in the Journal. Reviews should be no longer than 2,000 words.

All submissions must be formatted in Microsoft Word and include an abstract. Please adhere to the submission guidelines found at our website: <http://theyonseijournal.com/guidlines>

Submissions can be made via email at editor@theyonseijournal.com

The deadline for submissions is September 15, 2015
